Livestock Acted On

SOUTH BAY—Condemnation of insanitary property and prohibitions against livestock roaming at large in the city limits were chief topics under review by the Commission Tuesday evening.

Mayor S. J. Fisher presided over the discussions relative to condemnation proceedings provided for in ordinances now on the books.

With commissioners W. C. Allen and W. M. Jeffries in full agreement with the mayor, it was decided to ask City Attorney Claude Jones to draw up an ordinance which would permit the City Building Inspector to take immediate action in cases where buildings were not sanitary and public health was endangered. At present the ordinance allows 30 days' notification which is considered too liberal for safety.

No Emergency
The commission felt that emergency legislation relative to livestock roaming at large within the city limits was not necessary. However, it was decided to go ahead at next meeting with an ordinance giving the city more extensive control powers than it now has.

Presence of four commission members was necessary for passing an ordinance on first reading, with only three present, action was deferred.

Commission paid outstanding bills, discussed plans for forthcoming tax roll canvass and agreed that the election rolls would be revised up to date.

Summer Play Program In B.G.

BELLE GLADE — Field day, square dances and crafts absorbed the attention of 221 young people registered in the summer recreation program, according to Mrs. Genevieve Gove, director.

Awards in all age groups represented in the program were made at field day events on Wednesday. Records showed the nation's Wrens provided music for last Friday's square dance held on the tennis courts at City Park. A bicycle parade on Tuesday, July 13, at 3 p.m. will attract interest from all age groups in the recreation program.

Arts and crafts classes in the Girl Scout hut attract more than 100 children daily. Projects in bead work, bamboo craft and finger painting are popular. A library program, twice a week, and daily boxing matches are other activities of the program.

FEW CATTLE AT HOLIDAY MARKET

BELLE GLADE — The holiday celebration dampened the livestock market at Belle Glade Monday. Only 212 head were offered for sale compared with 1174 last week, according to Manager George C. Young.

Figures for Monday's sale which brought $10,413.58 follow:
87 calves, 16 steers, 39 cows, 10 heifers and four yearlings. Slaughter — steers, utility 12.00-16.70; culls, utility 10.50-12.00; calves, utility 10.50-12.00; culls, utility 8.25-10.75; hogs, 11.00; culls, 9.00-12.75; canner 7.25-8.00; shells 3.00-4.50; bulls, utility 12.25-14.00; culls, 10.50-11.50; heifers 8.00-11.25; calves 8.75; cows 5.00-5.75.

RIVER BRIDGE CLOSE TO START

SOUTH BAY — The temporary bridge is almost completed and the new two-lane steel bridge will soon be started over the New River Canal on SR 80.

This will replace the present wooden one-lane which has been in bad shape for some time. The Clear Brothers Construction Co. of West Palm Beach was awarded the contract to do the work.

The present bridge has been a traffic menace for some time as has the old bridge in Lake Harbor. This is to be replaced with a steel two-lane bridge. Clear Brothers will also do the work on the Lake Harbor bridge on SR 80 and U.S. 27.

CAMERA REPORT:

IN BELLE GLADE —

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Bratley returned from a 3,000 mile trip to Alaska and the Arctic Circle, via the route shown above. Solid line shows journey by land and air, dotted line the return trip by boat.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Because of the wide general interest in travel to remote places, GLADES OBSERVER asked Hugh J. Bratley to write the story of his and Mrs. Bratley's recent visit to Alaska. His colorful narrative follows:

ALASKAN TRIP IS REVELATION TO TWO GLADES RESIDENTS

BY HUGH J. BRATLEY

I have just returned from a trip to Alaska, going across the Arctic Circle and was impressed with the beauty of the scenery. I have not seen the Alps but if they hold more beauty than our Rockies I know I will not have breakfast in Miami June 1st and that Mrs. Bratley and I had breakfast in Miami June 1st and that evening we had dinner in Seattle, with a change of planes in Chicago. We went to Seattle to be there at the time of the Rotary International convention which convened June 6th to 10th. That gave us a few days for sight-seeing, because the morning of June 11th we joined a Thomas Cook & Sons personally conducted tour of Alaska.

We left Seattle in the forenoon by plane and arrived in Juneau in the afternoon. Spent two days there with hotel accommodations at the Baranof. Juneau is the most southern city in Alaska of much importance. The attraction of most importance here is the Mendenhall Glacier. We went to the glacier a few miles from the city. We had never seen a glacier and our first impression was awe-inspiring. I could begin to understand what John was trying to say when he was telling about his white spires. The glacier is 350 feet high, three miles wide at the face and about 20 miles long. It is so white that there are beautiful shades of blue mixed in with the white. This ice is much harder than the manufactured ice and the Baranof Hotel and several other places in Juneau use this ice for human consumption; it lasts much longer.

From Juneau we went by hydroplane to Taku, about 25 miles. This is a very restful place, if you want to get away from the city.

BELLE GLADE REC PROGRAM DRAWS 300
BELLE GLADE — Despite inclement weather the recreation program in the Palm Beach County summer recreation program at Belle Glade according to Mrs. Gladys McDonald, park superintendent.

Director Jack Smith, county coordinator of the recreation program said in the first week that Belle Glade had the best planned and most attractive program in the county, reported Mrs. McDonald.

From Juneau we went by hydroplane to Taku, about 25 miles. This is a very restful place, if you want to get away from the city.

From Taku we went by hydroplane to Skagway, about 25 miles. This is a very restful place, if you want to get away from the city.

From Skagway we went by hydroplane to Whitehorse, about 25 miles. This is a very restful place, if you want to get away from the city.

B.G. BUILDING UP IN JUNE

BELLE GLADE — With an increase of 20 jobs of construction or demolition over the May report Belle Glade City Inspector, N. B. Willis' June report indicates additional activity in that community. In May there were 35 jobs entailing over $500 each and in June there were 55, according to Willis.

Sanitary inspections totaled 444 leading that category with building inspections at 237 and electrical and plumbing inspections totaling 22 between them. Willis reports 235 city business contacts and 30 complaint calls answered.

Departmental collections totaled $340.85 and contacts 1,003, said Willis. The statistical summary follows:

Inspections:

Other Contacts:

The garbage and trash trucks moved 234 loads of trash and garbage for an approximate tonnage of 645 tons.

Gun Blaster To Grand Jury

BELLE GLADE — As the result of a shooting Wednesday about 10 a.m. Ivory Williams will be arraigned before the grand jury.

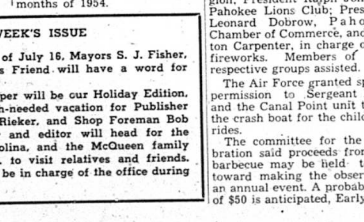

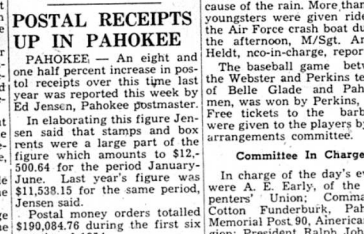

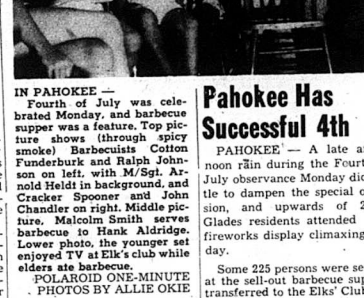

Williams, 29, according to witnesses, forcibly dragged Calnetta Watson, 19, his common law wife, to his room in the Oliver building and there allegedly shot her, wounding her fatally in the left arm and left breast. Another shot lodged in the wall of the kitchen where the shooting took place.

County State Attorney John Hiatt made the investigation, assisted by Sgt. J. B. Whitehurst and Officer Hilton Bonard of the Belle Glade Police Department.

There was no question about not holding Williams for grand jury because of the premeditated nature of the crime, police said.

Chief Magistrate of Belle Glade, B. F. Prescott assisted in the investigation.

W. C. Taylor was in charge of funeral arrangements for the victim.

'Condemn' Asks C-C

PAHOKEE — A formal request to the city to crack down on building condemnations and rid itself of the dilapidated structures scattered throughout the town will be made at City Council meeting Monday night, the Pahokee Chamber of Commerce board of directors decided this week.

Considerably irked by an anonymous letter of criticism of the town sent to C. C. President Leonard Dobrow recently, the directors agreed that only the city itself can accomplish the major needed improvements.

Many Suggestions

President Dobrow said that since publication of the critical letter in GLADES OBSERVER he has had suggestions that the city should pay more attention to its streets, particularly in Verville where, he promised, that buildings beyond repair be condemned and demolished; that there be better mosquito control; that the intersection of Lake Ave. and Main St. be widened to remove a dangerous spot for through traffic; that stop signs are inadequate; that bedraggled lots within the city limits be cleaned up.

Mayor Lewis Friend, a C of C director, said he disagreed on street conditions, and that aside from Verville, which certainly needed attention, the streets of the city are not as badly off as they could be.

Dobrow said he planned to present all suggestions—including one from a man offering to build on his 50 x 97 ft. lot for any five-year lease—to City Council.

Leading the list will be the C of C directors' motion favoring the immediate condemnation of unsafe buildings and institutions of proceedings for demolition.

More Housecleaning

Continuing its housecleaning actions, the board voted to revise the city's code of ordinances, the bylaws to enable dropping of any director missing two consecutive meetings without a valid excuse.

Members whose 1954 dues are not paid up within 10 days of final notification by letter will be dropped from the membership, the bylaws to enable dropping of any director missing two consecutive meetings without a valid excuse.

The name of James H. Wilson, who was dropped from the membership receipts, and Wilson thus won the weekend for two at the Colonnades Hotel, Palm Beach.

Other Actions

HEARCE, C. A. Bailey, of Belle Glade, will represent the city at county planning and zoning out-line the need for planning, request that a local commission be appointed, and deferred action until the 1954 legislative law opening a county commission zoning committee can be studied.

RECEIVED with thanks Bailey's compliments on the community fireworks program Monday night in observance of Independence Day, and took under advisement his suggestion that the next year the event be made Gladeswide.

VOTED to send letters of thanks to A. E. Early and the Carpenters' Union, Commandery Cotton, Fundburk, Pahokee Memorial Post 90, American Legion; President Ralph Johnson, Pahokee Lions Club; President Leonard Dobrow, Pahokee Chamber of Commerce, and Milton Carpenter, in charge of the fireworks. Members of those respective groups assisted.

The Air Force granted special permission to Sergeant Held and the Canal Point unit to use the crash boat for the children's rides.

The committee for the celebration said proceeds from the barbecue may be held to go toward making the observance an annual event. A probable net of $50 is anticipated, Early said.

CANAL POINT — Mr. and Mrs. Pope Sears are operating the new Texaco station at the intersection of Highways 99 and 441 here.

Pahokee Has Successful 4th

PAHOKEE — A late afternoon rain during the Fourth of July observance Monday did little to dampen the special occasion. More than 2,000 Glades residents attended the fireworks display climaxing the day.

Some 225 persons were served at the sell-out barbecue supper, transferred to the Elks' Club because of the rain. More than 150 youngsters were given rides in the Air Force crash boat during the afternoon, M/Sgt. Arnold Held, no-in-charge, reported.

The baseball game between the Webster and Perkins teams, of Belle Glade and Pahokee men, was won by Perkins, 10-2. Free tickets to the barbecue were given to the players by the arrangements committee.

Committee In Charge

In charge of the day's events were A. E. Early, of the Carpenters' Union; Commander Cotton, Fundburk, Pahokee Memorial Post 90, American Legion; President Ralph Johnson, Pahokee Lions Club; President Leonard Dobrow, Pahokee Chamber of Commerce, and Milton Carpenter, in charge of the fireworks. Members of those respective groups assisted.

POSTAL RECEIPTS UP IN PAHOKEE

PAHOKEE — An eight and one half percent increase in postal receipts over this time last year was reported this week by Ed Jensen, Pahokee postmaster.

In elaborating this figure Jensen said that stamps and box rents were a large part of the figure which amounts to $12,500.64 for the period January-June. Last year's figure was $11,538.15 for the same period, Jensen said.

Postal money orders totalled $190,084.76 during the first six months of 1954.

G.O.P. WEAKNESS: Florida

Republican leaders came to Washington to talk to officials in the Interior Department about the "red tide"—the mysterious aquatic organism that has killed so many fish off the Florida Gulf coast. They want to get some new action on the part of the Federal government, which they could have pointed out as being "republican inspired." What they should have known, and may have overlooked, is that they were heard on the toes of the entire Florida delegation and not just the two members of Congress they would like to see in their job has been done in Washington this term the results turned in by the entire Florida delegation on the "red tide" problem. Working as a team, they persuaded the Interior Department to dig up some unused emergency money ($60,000) to outfit a new Crisco-Crisco floating laboratory. This new 43 foot boat—asked for in January—already has been built, outfitted, and is operating in the Gulf today. Another bill which will allow the funds to keep this study going, was signed this week by the President. If the Republicans want to understand the members of the Florida delegation, they'll have to forget about getting the "red tide" into politics.

WINNIE'S FRIEND: Although Senator George Smathers was twisting the British "red tide" a bit lately, he recently jumped on Eden for pulling the rug from under us at Geneva, he is at heart a good fellow. Fact is, he has on his wall an autographed photographic portrait of the old man, and when Sir Winston spoke to the press club here last week, the only senator in the audience was Smathers. While some of the newsmen present seemed a bit irked that the Senator had crashed the gate—others were more interested in how he had managed it, since the press club is Washington's most exclusive of the old man, and when Sir Winston spoke to the press club here last week, the only senator in the audience was Smathers.

CALL THE LAW: Among the 400 sheriffs gathered here for their national convention were four from Florida. Willis McCull, sheriff of Lake County and past president of the Florida Sheriff's Association, was wearing a rattlesnake skin necktie with a tie clasp made from the rattles. Dave Starr, Orange County, moved up from 6th vice president to fifth place on the list of officers for the National Association. Sheriff Ed Blackburn of Hillsborough and Tom Kelly of Dade also were much in evidence. All were guests at a special luncheon given by the Florida Congressional delegation.

INSPECTIONS CAN PREVENT ACCIDENTS

TALLAHASSEE—One out of every four vehicles inspected by the 1954 safety check showed up with faults that could have led to an accident, the Florida Highway Patrol reported this week. Checking stations throughout Florida cooperated in the drive which resulted in 101,995 cars and trucks getting safety checks, and produced the fact that 29,209 of them failed to pass because of mechanical faults. The check started late in April and lasted through June. In the two months drive, the Patrol and the auto dealers' association of Florida made free inspections of 82,541 autos and 19,345 trucks. They found that all vehicles had 43,321 defects combined with the leading cause being lack of lights: headlights, tail lights, tag and stop lights. The combined total faults of those four pieces of equipment was 22,820.

WASHINGTON NEWSLETTER

By Sen. George Smathers

WASHINGTON—Winston Churchill, the dynamic prime minister of Great Britain, was in town last week, bawling with President Eisenhower and other government leaders about the many trying problems facing the world.

It was my privilege to attend a luncheon where Churchill spoke. I have always admired the great wartime leader of Great Britain for his enormous abilities, the magnetic force of his person, and the sense of humor he has for so long symbolized the inspiring courage which sustained the Allies in darkest days.

Churchill spoke with force and conviction here. The message he left concerned the "peaceful coexistence" of the nations, and the peoples of the world, must be made plain. Churchill's analysis emphasizes the fact that this is what we as a nation have sought for years. Our entire effort should be to insure peace and to persuade the world that we are not aggressive. It takes two to make a war, but it also takes two to make peace. And while moving toward peace, we must not neglect the problems of the modern world, we still know that hope for a genuine "peaceful coexistence" cannot be aided by weakness on our part.

Another of our Senate colleagues passed away—the Honorable Hugh Butler, of Nebraska suffering a stroke after a strenuous legislative day and dying within 14 hours. Senator Butler was chairman of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee on which I had served the past two years, and was new to me as a fine man, a real leader and patriot, who believed in the fundamental right of every man to disagree with him.

We are on different sides in the statehood fight, but though we fought hard, he gave me his warm friendship and, as chairman, he exercised the utmost fairness and consideration to opponents.

Senator Butler was the seventh Senator to die during this session, the fourth this year. Senators Hank Griswold, and Hoya passed within recent weeks: death took Senators Taft, Tobey, and Willis Smith last year. All were personal friends, and those losses touched me personally. After many false starts, the Small Business Administration finally has made up its mind and is opening an office in Florida. Wendell Barnes has advised me that he has selected Miami for the location and that the office will be open about mid-July. Administrator Barnes said, "The branch office manager for the Florida office will establish a schedule of periodic visits to major concentrations of industry within the state. In order to reach the best possible service to small business in Florida, within the limitations of personnel available to this agency, it may be desirable that a periodic schedule of visits be established for Orlando and other cities in the state."

Not all of Florida will be served, however, by this Miami office. Those counties west of the Apalachicola River will be served by the SMA Alabama office at Montgomery. There is a possibility the Jacksonville area may be served by the regional office at Atlanta. The Florida office will be very small, manned by a "financial adviser" and an "industrial adviser." When permanently manned, the Florida office is to be given authority to approve loans up to $50,000.

THE CIGAR AID BILL: Science has made remarkable progress in its search for the cause and cure for the dread disease, cancer. There is basic hope that within a decade this disease no longer may be the scourge of mankind that we know it is today. Encouraged by reports of progress in cancer research, Congress has passed and sent to the White House a bill (HR 8149) which will authorize a $200,000-

BY SCHATZI

Well, I haven't been so excited since the day I found my first restaurant garbage can! I AM GOING ON VACATION AFTER ALL! There is less to be said about it, though. Wouldn't you know it, the boss said "Write a column each week while you're gone, or no vacation." I snarled. I showed my teeth. I made all the hair stand up on my back, from my collar to my tail.

It didn't do any good. It never does any good. I will be writing a column. But it will be in the form of a letter. It will be addressed to Maybelline, who has promised to write MB a letter, too. Maybelline is a snail with a reddish tinge about the eyes from drinking brackish water.

Quite frankly, I wonder if she can write. It is hard enough for a poor, shortlegged dog to column, to teach the typewriter keys, and remember that the left hind paw is best for holding down the keys. But I do want to see Maybelline, with no paws at all, ever being able to write a letter.

Having grown up in a pond, she didn't have the opportunity to learn how to swim, and I, too, have the same problem. Her abilities, to tamper with Lewis Carroll, are confined to licking, writhing, and a rhythmic tic. However, Maybelline says she'll be writing to you, and I, too, have the same problem. Having grown up in a pond, she didn't have the opportunity to learn how to swim, and I, too, have the same problem.

Dear Schatzi: Wait until you know me better. At least you give me credit for one thing and that is not being a snake in the grass snake. We snakes, or reptiles as we prefer to be called, do come in harmless as well as in dangerous packages. Unfortunately we are all tarred with the same brush and lumped into the category of "snake" because we must wriggle to get anywhere it is grassy or cindered or just sticky.

Any cracks you make about my process of locomotion will be met with a few remarks about yours. For instance your shortumpy legs transport you over smooth ground with the tall timber—malden cane around here—so much faster than you can go. Dogs are lucky, who ever heard of a snake going on a vacation with anybody. The only kind of snake I know that gets carried about in a basket is the Indian hoodoo snake. I'd rather not be an actor and have to dance to the fakir's pipe. No wonder the cobra is hoodoo, he is hiding his beauty and charm for being deadly and a make-shift entertainer.

Maybe dogs make history, there was Falla of renown and then there was the terrier that went with Mary, Queen of Scots to the gallows and there are references to heroic escapades paraded in history books. I won't take any credit away from you, but I will say this that I came first in history because it was I who inhabited the garden of Eden—and you did.

Writheingly yours, Maybelline

000 program of improvement and expansion of diagnostic and research centers as part of the "Health Research" hospital program. A Florida doctor's work helped "sell" this measure. Dr. J. Ernest Ayre, of the University of Miami, has done such a remarkable work in studying cancer. I am proud he has many cures in the record. President Eisenhower has signed into law the new fisheries aid measure, which will be the Florida delegation who worked hard and cooperatively for its passage called the "Red Tide" bill. This measure was originated in the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and, being a member of that committee, I was able to help some strategic ticks for it. When it got into difficulty on the Senate floor, Senator Holland and I helped satisfy some about it, and helped compromise.

In the House, Chairman Courtney Campbell, a member of the Fisheries Committee, helped bring it to the floor and there the Florida delegation joined in the voting virtually unanimous approval. Under the law, the Secretary of the Interior will have a special fund of up to $3 million to aid the domestic fishing industry. The money will come from allocation of 30 per cent of annual collections from import duties collected on foreign fish products.

horse. When we left Whitehorse we took a plane to Fairbanks about a five hour ride. We had two busy days at Fairbanks where we stayed at the Nordale Hotel. Fairbanks is a very active place. It is the gateway for all the northern part of Alaska and will always be a good town. Here we are as far west as the Hawaiian Islands and a little further North than Helsinki, Finland. The people of Fairbanks have quite a celebration on June 21st each year. Their principal attraction is to have a ball game commencing at midnight. At that time of the year it does not get dark. The sun sets about 11 o'clock at night and rises a little after one in the morning; so the twilight of the evening meets the twilight of the dawn. There is no darkness after sundown. We had time to do a little looking around and shopping here.

Mr. Bratley and I were both impressed with the nice stores in all of the places we had been. The stores in Fairbanks were beautiful and the assortment of things one could get was a credit to any other town. The State Store is higher, fresh milk is 45 cents a quart. Ripe Bing cherries 95 cents a pound. There were also peaches, everything you could buy in Seattle was available here. The ladies ready-to-wear store was stocked with first class merchandise and the assortment is good.

Real Sourdoughs One of the days we had at Fairbanks we took a plane and went to Fort Yukon so we could have the honor of being north of the Arctic Circle. We each received our "parliament" so now we can show proof that we are full fledged Sourdoughs. A few miles from Fort Yukon is located Circle Hot Springs. Here in the midst of these mountains rearing their heads into perpetual snow is a spring of water so hot the resort uses the water to heat the rooms in the winter and to do their cooking with the year round. While at Circle Hot Springs we saw a Cadillac bearing the Florida license. It was from area three. We were told a doctor from Tampa goes there every summer. Back in Fairbanks we visited the campus of the University of Alaska, the farthest North of any college in the United States.

The government has an Experimental Station at Fairbanks. The man in charge is trying to raise a cabbage here, which will weigh 50 pounds. Last year he nearly reached his goal by raising one that weighed 46 pounds. That is pretty fast growing when you realize that 90 days is the length of their growing season. After the plant would commence to head that would mean a growth of nearly a pound a day.

It was interesting to see the placer mining. We visited a dog farm when a man has 70 breeding dogs from which he breeds racing dogs for sled racing. We also made close inspection of a fish wheel which I think is a large man's way of fishing, but they use all sorts of devices for catching fish that is a very important livelihood with the people of that area.

From Fairbanks we went to Mt. McKinley Park. Hotel accommodations were fine, but as far as the scenery is concerned it was very disappointing, because the day was cloudy and the mountains were very low obscuring all views of a distance; however, we did see some wild moose, a bear and two good size bears. We were very lucky, the day was not much sheep, so the day was not entirely lost.

From Mt. McKinley Park to Seward we travelled by rail. Here again I do not believe the Alps could hold more beauty than the mountains and glaciers which we passed.

Anchorage The City On this trip we stopped at Anchorage. This is the coming city of Alaska. The federal government is putting millions of dollars here making it the line of defense for the army and navy. With the military personnel we were told the population of Anchorage was about 50,000.

It was told the federal government was abandoning Nome as an outpost of defense because the harbor could not be depended on to be open. While the harbor at Anchorage is always open, therefore moving the line of defense to Anchorage. In my opinion this will always be a good town, even if the federal government were not to continue with its activities in Alaska that Horace Greely had in mind when he said, "Go West, young man, Go West" it must have been Anchorage.

At Seward we boarded the boat Alaska for Seattle. It took three days and nights to make this trip. We returned to Juneau, remained there eight hours and from there to Seattle by the inland passage. We stopped at Petersburg, Wrangell and Ketchikan. I wondered why we stopped so long at some of these places, as long as 11 hours in Petersburg. I learned that the steamship could pass some places on when the tide was just right; if too low there would not be water enough to float the boat, so we had to wait for high tide.

This gave us plenty of opportunity to visit a fish cannery and a milk farm where they had 3,000 breeding minks. The man has half a dozen different colors and shades of furs he is breeding. He has a pair of white mink and he is going to try to raise this very valuable shade of fur. The farm had been closed for several weeks to visitors because of the birth period of the little mink and the farm was opened two days before we were there to visitors.

We arrived in Seattle the afternoon of June 28th after having traveled about 3,000 miles. That evening at 9:30 we left Seattle and arrived in Miami the afternoon of June 29th at 2 p.m. and reached Belle Glade about six that evening. Of all the scenery we saw, the most beautiful sight was when we saw our home in Belle Glade racing dogs from which he breeds

OBSERVATIONS

By BENJAMIN S. ROBERTS

We live in an age of specialization. Competency in one profession or in one skill has permitted America to advance because her people have possessed this attribute to a high degree. But there is danger in specialization. Because we are trained to see only a part of a whole activity we lose sight of the entirety, it then becomes a habit to ignore those things, which do not directly pertain to the activity at hand.

Narrowness of view rather than broadmindedness must not prevail in our society, which requires breadth of scope and understanding. It is interesting to note that this accent on specialization occurs where a two-party political system has prevailed for more than 100 years.

In a two-party system persons of divergent political beliefs have difficulty in finding the exact environment—call it specialized environment—necessary for the expression of their individual political beliefs. France, with 18 or more political parties, each especially concerned with some particular group, affords an opportunity for expression to many groups. But the enjoyment of such diversity of political views an opportunity for them by partisans or opponents.

Liberal and conservative are specialized brands of men, bred rather than adopted. Lay persons and professional politicians rarely express a preference for either label, instead, it is expressed for them by partisans or opponents.

In the United States where specialization exists to a high degree in professions and skills there is no specialization possible in party beliefs because the dividing line in principle between the two is not marked in any basic policy. In recent times bi-partisan decisions in domestic and foreign affairs have prevailed. Divisions in the Senate have shown a notable geographical rather than a party political basis in voting. Many decisions before the public and its representatives require decisions based on principles and not on party.

Possibly one of the great advantages of our political system is its comprehensiveness and overall ability to permit persons with specialized professional or technical views an opportunity to work out their political destiny within a framework flexible enough to meet every need.

By specializing in two parties and making them elastic in their platforms, citizens of this country have a government without sacrificing personal political opinion.

with room to grow

in LATER YEARS

TODAY

We'll help you build an up-to-date house to fit your present needs . . . a "Starter" home carefully planned for expansion as your family increases.

Flexible design provides a breezeway or patio that can be enclosed into a sound proof nursery for the babies . . . a side porch that converts into a fun room for teen-agers . . . a new wing to provide one or two bedrooms for the youngsters.

When you build a house basically designed to be expanded, future additions like these can be made easily and at least expense.

FIND YOUR HOME IN OUR PLAN BOOKS

You won't find "Cracker Boxes" or "Barracks" among the Starter homes pictured in our Plan Books. Every house is designed by a leading architect to give maximum value at minimum cost. Individual changes can be made in the original plans at small extra cost.

MATERIAL ADVICE -- FINANCING AID

We'll recommend top values in materials -- give you a wealth of money saving construction tips, recommend contractors. One of our staff will explain financing . . . show you how you can pay for your home in rent-like monthly installments.

RED CROSS DISASTER RELIEF APPEAL

With the request by the Mexican government that Red Cross feed 8000 persons in flood-stricken Ciudad Acuna for an extra three days, the fund appeal for the relief of flood victims in Mexico and Southwest Texas took on extra urgency this week. Apophis shots for 36,000 persons have averted a mass epidemic of that disease in the devastated area.
